UniDoc Project communication overview
November 2012

Overview of project

The ANU Enterprise Environment does not utilise a centralised information repository that is aligned with the information management recommendations of the National Archives of Australia. This has resulted in inefficiencies in the electronic management of University records, an inability to efficiently search for electronic documents and decreased compliance with relevant information management legislative requirements. The UniDoc project will address these issues by providing a centralised information management environment that will improve information management efficiency, improve the end user document search capability and reduce corporate risk through greater compliance with relevant legislative requirements. The UniDoc project also aligns with the Commonwealth government’s Digital Transition Policy which aims to adopt digital record keeping for efficiency purposes, with the majority of records created, stored and managed digitally in the future.

Where is the project up to?

The UniDoc project is rapidly advancing through the first phase of deployment, the Policy Application with the design and build of the solution having already commenced. Whilst the Policy Application is being developed, the project is in the process of engaging a specialist Records Information Management Strategy (RIMS) Vendor to develop a comprehensive Information Management Strategy, a suite of documents which will facilitate the commencement of the primary UniDoc deployment.

What’s happening next?

In addition to the completion of the Policy Application design and build stages; the specialist Information Management vendor will be commencing onsite towards the end of November 2012.
